WORK OF EFFICIENCY ENGINEERS

"Efficiency engineers," appointed two years ago, have rendered their report concerning the government of Iowa. Nothing was too great, nothing too small, for their consideration. They recommend a consolidation of all departments, with increased centralization of responsibility. The governor, they hold, should appoint the heads of all executive departments; the Chief Justice should be elected by the people and appoint all subordinate judges. This would result in a short ballot, indeed. Other suggestions are less debatable, as that there should be a State purchasing agent to buy supplies for all departments, a legislative reference bureau to aid in preparing laws, and a reduction of committee clerks from 130 to 45, with a corresponding reduction of janitors and doorkeepers. The striking feature of the report is less in its specific recommendations than its thorough "business" spirit, in the technical sense. Its authors explain that the organization they propose is patterned after the business system of the corporation laws of Oregon, with the Legislature acting as proxy holders for the electors, and the Governor president of the corporation, with his council a board of directors.—New York Evening Post.

"Some means ought to be found by the powers that be to seal the lips of the Ambassador to Great Britain or else in justice to the American people, he ought to be recalled and that as promptly as possible," is the formal statement of Senator Chamberlain (Democrat) of Oregon, Saturday, after reading the cable accounts of Ambassador Page's address before the Associated Chambers in London Wednesday night. That would be a gag law. The American Ambassador is just trying to please. He "condenses" his utterances. The average Senator in the American Congress should study the art of condensation as used in diplomacy before presuming to criticize too drastically the offhand remarks of a diplomatic representative of his government.—Houston Post.

We object to the remarks of the Post in regard to United States Senators condensing. We insist that the junior Senator from Texas be given all the latitude he wants. He needs it. A man the size of Senator Shepard cannot contain the well-spring of thought that bubbles from within without an explosion.

The Houston Post believes Clarence Ousley to be the "giant" they have been looking for to lead the "Constructive" Democrats to victory. The Chronicle has not spoken, but a few straws released on the political winds have blown in the direction of Ball.

one another, with no more intimate or social atmosphere than in a railroad station.

Its imposing facade impresses the fellow on the street, and that is all it is really good for. In a true social sense it is as bogus as Mrs. Upper-crust's big party.—Saturday Evening Post.

WHAT ARE THE "MANSIONS" IN THE SKY? TO BE?

In the April Woman's Home Companion Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle in New York City, writes an Easter sermon entitled "The Other World." At the beginning of the article he quotes the passage from John: "In my Father's house are many mansions." With respect to the word "mansions" he says:

"The appearance of the word 'mansions' in this sentence is unfortunate. It does not convey to our mind the atmosphere or content of the Greek noun for which the word stands. The revisers have not ventured to take it out, although they are good enough to remind us in the margin that it is permissible to substitute for it 'abiding places.' Some scholars prefer 'rooms' or 'abodes,' others do not like to surrender the original meaning of the Greek word, 'stopping places' or 'stations.' Any one of them is better than 'mansions.'

"The trouble with the word 'mansions' is that it is too splendid. It suggests a house imposing and pretentious. It makes us think of a palace, and we should not feel at ease in a palace. We enjoy walking through a palace, but we have no desire to make our home there. We were lowly born and our tastes are humble. A cottage is cozier and more comfortable than a mansion, and if you call heaven a mansion you use a word which does not soothe or woo the heart."

WOMEN IN THE BEE BUSINESS.

Beekeeping means not only pleasure and profit, but a more healthful condition of body and mind. It is well adapted to women, and fits in with other work. It is not necessary to devote any regular time to it, as you can generally plan for it according to the work you have on hand, and the season is practically confined to six months of the year. As to location, it is possible to keep bees in the city, even on the roofs of buildings, but of course it is much better to be in the suburbs, and better still in the country.

My sister and I have kept bees for the last eight years. We started with only two colonies. At the end of our first season we had increased our colonies to four and had taken off twenty-five boxes of honey, besides several more boxes partly finished. We gradually increased to nineteen colonies, but found that was too many to care for with our other work, so we have only thirteen at present. Our crop of honey varies according to conditions. Some seasons we have had over 450 boxes of honey, besides many unfinished boxes that we keep for our own use. What we sell retails for 25c per box, but we make a special price to dealers. The net amount received for honey adds quite a little to our income.—Emily L. Tucker in Farm and Fireside.

NEW CURRENCY LAW-DISSECTION

Chicago, Ill., March 13.—The Western Economic Society opened a conference here today and will devote the time exclusively to the discussion of the workings of the new currency law. It is expected to be one of the most important and interesting congresses of scientists and financial experts which has gathered in this country.

Every aspect of the new law in its probable workings will be discussed, from the elasticity of credit up to the control of the international flow of gold. The program includes addresses or papers by the following authorities: Thomas Conway Jr., assistant professor of finance, University of Pennsylvania.

Jacob H. Hollander, professor of political economy, Johns Hopkins University.

Earl Dean Howard, Hart, Schaffner & Marx.

J. Laurence Laughlin, professor of political economy, University of Chicago.

George E. Roberts, director of the mint, Washington, D. C.

W. A. Scott, director of the School of Commerce, University of Wisconsin.

O. M. W. Sprague, Edmond Cogswell Converse, professor of banking and finance, Harvard University.

F. M. Taylor, professor of political economy and finance, University of Michigan.

H. Parker Willis, Journal of Commerce, New York City.

George Woodruff, First National Bank of Joliet, Ill.

All sessions will be open for general discussion. President Shaller Matthews of the society will preside at the meeting.

BAPTIST REVIVAL.

Sunday Was a Grand Day and the Meeting Is Bearing Fruit.

The first week of the revival in progress at the First Baptist Church was largely a season of sowing. By sowing is meant the enlistment of the Christian people of the community and getting them enthused with a burning desire for the salvation of the lost. This was one feature of the sowing, the evangelist preaching largely to the Christians. The second part of the sowing has been the awakening of the serious thoughts of the unsaved. Getting them to look within, bringing them to a realization of their condition and their need of a personal Savior. The sowing having been well done, harvest time has now arrived, and the meeting is beginning to bear fruit.

Dr. Butler spoke three times yesterday, at the Sunday school at 10 o'clock, at the 11 o'clock and night services. Great audiences filled the church at each service, and at the night service it was said to have been the largest audience assembled in the church since W. J. Bryan lectured there several years ago. The interest was fine at each service, and the interest and earnestness are notably increasing daily.

At each service yesterday large numbers made professions, and at the close of the night service six united with the church, four by baptism and two by letter. There were three additions at this morning's service, one by baptism and two by letter.

The services will continue through the week at 10 in the morning and 7:45 at night.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend each service.

ELKS' SHOW TO BE GREAT.

More interest has been shown in the Elks' big minstrels, which will be given its presentation at the Colonial Theatre next Friday night, than has ever before been displayed by the staging of a local show. First of all, the Elks never do things by halves, and then, too, the proceeds of the show will go to paying off the balance of the new home fixings.

The show itself has a world of merit to it, and the performance will be a clean, high class, elevating show, well worth seeing. The advance sale on tickets is already the largest of any of the preceding shows, and a house full of people will see the Elks' big minstrels next Friday night.

BRYAN DEFEATED KURTEN.

The Bryan high school girls defeated the Kurten girls in a basketball game Saturday afternoon on the high school grounds by a score of 23 to 10. The game was fast and exciting, but the Kurten girls were outclassed from the start.
